

Full Success Is Noted for German Visit

(From press One)
Twin Falls put on its average of 100,000 visitors for the year. This was "I wondered why the press was paying so much attention to us. Then I realized that the purpose was to enable people to become acquainted with us and to let them know that we were a good place for people to work." For that I am very grateful.

Before leaving on the economic tour of the state, Dr. Buhl spent the afternoon with Latimore, director of city administration, problems, and Hansen Out, Singen city planner, conferred with Nels Crossley, Twin Falls city engineer.

During the day, while buildings materials wholesale, was taken on a tour of construction projects by Warren Berry, Twin Falls manager of the Volvo Builders Supply Corporation.

Before returning to Germany, the delegation, which included Dr. Gier, Dr. Kempf, Singer physician, and Martin Herter, aluminum refinery supervisor, stopped at the Chicago, Detroit, and Buffalo.

Bernd said he and his colleagues, all of whom are members of the Ring, are interested in learning how to expand their activities to the manufacture of automobiles in Detroit, and when they get to Buffalo, seeing Niagara falls.

Soviets Release 4 Custom Guards

BERLIN, April 23.—The communist East German government announced the release of four German custom guards kidnapped with their equipment from West Berlin.

Their release was announced by the ministry of the interior a few hours after publication of a vigorous protest by the West German communists to the Soviet authorities demanding the immediate return of both craft and crew.

The released custom guards arrived in West Berlin tonight in the U. S. sector. The communists say they have not returned the boat.

Israelis Ready Celebration to Cite Founding

TEL AVIV, Israel, April 21—Israelis will gather this weekend to celebrate their independence and their affiliation into a nation.

Week-long festivities with parades, military displays and discussion periods will feature Israel's observance of the beginning of its eighth year of independence.

The celebration consists of a time when Israel is harassed by recurrent border incidents and when Arab military might is growing.

It is a period also when Israel's confidence in the United Nations and world powers appears to be at a low ebb.

Speech Planned

The holiday will get into full swing Tuesday evening with a special session in synagogues and radio speech by President Itzhak Ben-Zvi and Premier Moshe Sharett.

The evening will be highlighted by a parade of 600 young carriers of the flag, the band marching the streets and performing dances. The parade will be concluded with the release of hundreds of colorful balloons.

Proceeding Thursday night's party, however, flags will fly at half-mast in memory of the Israelis who lost their lives in the war with the Arabs in 1948. All day a torch with a flame from Mount Zion will burn in front of the Jerusalem municipality building. It will be guarded by an honor guard of veterans who served in the underground army before the state was formed.

Service Set

Memorial services will be held on Mt. Herzl where victims of the Arab war lie in a military cemetery. The city schools will be closed to the dead and hear talks on the significance of the occasion.

Impressive military parades will be held in all cities during the week's celebration on Wednesday.

The observance will end Friday night and Saturday with rallies throughout the country. Members of the cabinet will participate in a program of new government activities where Zionism will be explained.

Small Investors Are Wooed As Millionaires Fade Away

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK (NEA)—The shirt-sleeved clerk in the bustling wire room of one New York's biggest brokerage houses flipped through a stack of cards with "old-timers" names. "Here take a look."

Odd-jobs are transactions under 100 shares of stock. Each card was a separate order—some to purchase stock, some to sell. There were such notations as "sell 15 shares," "buy 25 shares," "buy 100 shares." In the stock market, a card is as good as three million shares bought and sold. But enough peanuts make an elephant.

And today's elephantine stock market is increasingly being made up of these and other small trades. Naturally, odd-jobs are rapidly increasing.

"This is the age of the little financier," says Harold J. Baché, a partner of the 75-year-old firm, Baché and company.

And today the little financier—the white-collar worker, the housewife, the feed-store manager—the factory worker—is in the stock market more than ever before in history.

The New York Stock Exchange, studying all transactions during two typical market days in December, found that 75 percent of all stock sales were by persons with an income of less than $10,000. The over $25,000 income bracket was considerably smaller.

Another study is even more conclusive: One-tenth—nearly one-tenth more than three-quarters of all investors are in the under-$10,000 bracket, and almost a third make less than $5,000.

Why are the small investors turning to stocks? "People got more money," says one Wall street man. "And there are more people."

That is, of course, true—the country is prosperous and the population is increasing. But there have been prosperous periods before when the white-collar worker put his money in the bank and the farmer tucked it in a mattress.

Now they buy stocks. The reason is simple: The stock market is the fact—the brokers and the stock market are conducting an energetic educational program, and there's a cli-

Einstein Brain Renews Battle About 'Genius'

NEW YORK, April 23 (UPI)—Referring to the brain of Einstein, which now is in a glass jar awaiting scientific study, an eminent neurologist was reminded of his words.

He was a medical institution, assuring the man in charge. This world-famous, most learned doctor was engaged in a game of chess with an inmate who was, he said, an idiot.

He played a mere game of chess, which is reputed to be an intellectual game. When the young doctor came into the room, the idiot had the greater part of his opponent's pieces, bound, and frustrated. All these things were reflected on the great brain's face.

Question Asked

But the idiot brain's facial mirror was bright with mirth, and the question was posed into the young doctor's mind: "The question was, 'Which is the idiot?'"

The neurologist was pointing out that despite the vast accumulation of knowledge, man still does not know very little about it. That's not contradictory. Science knows its anatomy in minute detail. Yet anatomically, science cannot say the difference between the brain of a genius and the brain of an idiot.

Scientifically the neurologist belongs to the school which argues that genius has a physical cause, opposite the school which says that everything must have a physical cause. Therefore, the physical cause of Einstein's genius must be in his brain, since the human body is no more intelligent than the grass. It just has to be there, and if it isn't found, it means only that science doesn't know how to look.

Offers to Bet

The neurologist decided to bet $1000 to $1 that no physical cause would be found in Einstein's brain, no matter how closely it is studied. Other scientists, even physical-cause ones, said the odds were even. And no one else would bet. It just has to be there, and if it isn't found, it means only that science doesn't know how to look.

The neurologist decided to bet $1000 to $1 that no physical cause would be found in Einstein's brain, no matter how closely it is studied. Other scientists, even physical-cause ones, said the odds were even. And no one else would bet. It just has to be there, and if it isn't found, it means only that science doesn't know how to look.

At any rate, the great scientist's genius life with a brain smaller than average. The genius-naturalist, Georges Cuvier, had a larger than average brain. The brains of other great scientists are also larger physically. Indeed, when the Einstein brain was taken from its normal casing, the doctors remarked that it looked like just any other.

Since the physical cause for everything-school has so far found nothing to support itself in the human brain, then how do their opponents argue?

Arnold Toynbee Green They argue that "forces" develop in the intricate physical functioning of the brain which converts a blubbery mass of blood tissue and nerve cells into a mind. But that these "forces" are not known because they have no physical existence. Yet, the proofs are obvious, they say.

For example, we all have consciousness, in greater or lesser degree, but what is the "force" that creates it? Yet there is a consciousness of which we are conscious and another, the "super-ego," of which we are not conscious. Also there are both "good" and "bad" feelings.

To sum up, there is an unconscious mind as well as a conscious one, which both are manifestations of the same basic "force."

The "force" of these "forces" is the shifting of power from one to another, the subjugation of one by another, the balances achieved among them—all these vastly subtle and intricate relationships, which can also make for idiocy, these scientists say.

Uranium Scramble Fever Hits Idaho; Hunters Arrive, Stake Claims, Wait

BOISE, April 23 (UPI)—The great scramble for uranium—the raw material of atomic energy—is surging on in the high school junior class in Idaho, where miners for almost a century have been finding pay dirt in deposits of gold and silver, copper, lead and zinc.

More than 2,000 claims have been staked in the state, mostly along the valley of the Salmon river, which winds through the trackless wilderness of Idaho's "primitive area."

Since early April the state has leased almost 150,000 acres of public land to uranium prospectors, and applications are piling up by the score.

Letters from folks who want to cash in on the boom used to reach the state mine inspector's office at the rate of seven to 10 week. Now they arrive in batches of 20 or 30 at a time.

Sales of geiger counters, "detectors" and "snappers" are soaring in Boise and other towns across the state. Hotel rooms are at a premium in towns like Salmon, Challis and Hailey.

The search paid off. Drilling companies are now at work in the Cascade and Bear valleys producing 80 per cent of the nation's monazite, as well as other strategic minerals such as columbite and tantalite.

But the boom is still in its spring, and the news of finds in the primitive area and north Idaho's panhandle. Activity is expected to increase as the snow recedes from the upper valleys.

McDowell sends a 25-cent copy of the state's mining laws to prospectors who ask for details on how to cash in on the bonanza.

"Big uranium rush around our ranch and vicinity," wrote one farmer, "and some prospectors have ended until July 2, 1941."

FFA Awards Are Given at Annual Meet

JEROME, April 22.—The annual FFA awards banquet was served Tuesday night at the Methodist church. The FFA outstanding youth award was given to Harold Jenkins, 10th and Mrs. Harold Jenkins, a senior, was presented with a wrist watch.

Jenkins was postmaster. The invocation was given by Kenneth Fuller. More than 115 persons attended the event. Community service was led by Norman Jerke.

Bronze foundation awards were presented to the following individuals: LaVonne Hall, farm safety; Danny Forsyth, soil and water management; Jerry Kuhn, soil conservation; Dick Morris, soil chapter leader; and Bill Eskin, public speaking.

Production awards sponsored by the Jerome Cooperative Creamery were presented to Allison, Kenneth Jenkins and the showmanship award was given to Jerry Kuhn.

"A" awards for FFA activities were presented to Dick Buse, Roger Clegg, Jerry Kuhn, and Jerry Jenkins. Jerry H. O. Nix, Eddie Dexter, and Max Thompson, all bronze; Donald Barba, Gene Casto, Robert Barba, Layne Hall, Bill Eskin, Jerry Kuhn, and Danny Forsyth, all silver; and Linda Jenkins and Larry Allison, both gold.

Mrs. Herman Hall was presented with the chapter mother award. She was selected as the most helpful mother. FFA participants were presented to Mrs. Shirley and Helen Dennelly for acting as office secretaries.

Honorary membership pins were presented to William Thompson, Paul and Helen Kershaw, and David Castro for their adult assistance to the chapter members. Awards were presented by Carter Luther, advisor.

Speakers for the banquet were: LaVonne Hall, who gave the address of welcome; Anna Dykstra, FFA president; Danny Forsyth, Jerry Kuhn, and Bill Eskin, who discussed social security.

Music was furnished by Damon Rutherford, concert solo, LaVern Neaves, vocal solo, and the FFA quartet, Douglas Brown, Bruce Thompson, Norman Jerke, Robert Barba. A reading was given by Gene Casto.
